Foreword

THIS brief record of the John Wampler family has been in process of compilation since 1921. In August of that year a reunion of the "family" was held at the Frederick Wampler homestead, five miles north of Harrisonburg on the Edom road. The meeting was well attended, several hundred of the immediate descendants being present. For this meeting and its success, J. D. Wampler and his family were largely responsible, and the credit should be theirs. At this first meeting a simple organization was effected, which had for its object two special things: preparation for regular reunions of the family, and provision for some sort of family record. With the exception of one year the reunion has been held annually since. The writer was appointed at the same time to compile the material for the family record.

The assembling of this material has been a work of considerable detail. It has taken time and patience, and is not now complete. With the best that could be done, numerous items of information have not been ascertained. It has been thought well to print the material in such a way that each one who has a copy of the booklet can easily insert the data as it later comes to hand.

In collecting the material I have been most kindly helped by many persons—in fact, more than I can now recall. But among those who have been especially helpful in collecting data, I may mention the following—Cora Driver Louderback, of Stanley, Va., who supplied much of the biographical material; D. Sayler Good, of Roanoke; J. D. Wampler, of Harrisonburg; Mary Andes Wampler, of Broadway; N. Walter Coffman, of Waynesboro; Rebecca Wampler Holsinger, of Harrisonburg; Lizzie Wampler Myers, of Edom; Annie Roller, of New Market; Isaac C. Crist, of Timberville, and many others. I sincerely thank one and all for whatever help they have given.

The John Wampler Family

PRELIMINARY STATEMENT

JOHN WAMPLER, the first of his name in Virginia, was born September 11, 1768, probably in Pennsylvania. At any rate, here we find him thirty-three years later a married man with five children. His wife was Magdalene Garber, a woman or more than ordinary vivacity and ability. She was likewise born in 1768.

About 1801 the family moved from Pennsylvania to Beaver Dam, Maryland, where they seem to have been engaged in farming. Here they lived for ten years and here five more children were born to them. In addition to his secular occupation John Wampler was also active in the work of the Christian ministry. He was a member of the Dunker church (Church of the Brethren), in which he became an active leader and elder.

In 1811 they moved from Beaver Dam to Rockingham County, Virginia. The family now consisted of father and mother and ten children. An eleventh child was born to them after settling in the Shenandoah Valley. At that time both parents were about forty-three years of age.

Our ancestor bought a tract of land in the Long Meadows, lying some two miles south of where Timberville is now located and about the same distance east of Broadway. It appears that this was a considerable tract comprising probably six hundred to eight hundred acres. At that time most of this was still in virgin forest.

The family took up their abode at the spring of what we of a later generation have learned to know as the Martin Wampler place, on the highway from Linville to New Market, long since known as the Wampler road. The old log house in which the family first lived is still standing and is in a fair state of preservation (see cuts). This seems rather remarkable when we remember that the large house built for the accommodation of the family some years later has been removed for a new dwelling.

This second house erected for the accommodation of the Wampler family was not an inconspicuous dwelling. It stood some distance back from the spring where the first dwelling was erected, with a beautiful sloping lawn between. It was a large log building almost square in form with a basement under the entire house and a large attic above the second story. It was plastered and whitewashed within and stuccoed in white without. It stood facing the Wampler road, one of the main thoroughfares of Rockingham county in that day. A long porch ran the entire length of the building in front. Within, in addition to the arrangements for the accommodation of the family, the building was also planned for church services. A partition between two of the large rooms was placed on hinges so that it could be removed and accommodations made for a good sized audience. So in those early days before the Brethren in the Shenandoah Valley had a church house, the John Wampler home was the scene of many a preaching service, council meeting, love feast, and other gatherings of the Brethren.

In this house on the large primitive farm our ancestors lived and reared their family of eleven children. Here they died and were buried in the family grave-yard, he at the age of seventy-seven years, she at the age of eighty-seven. Of their eleven children, six were sons and five were daughters. These all married and established homes of their own. For the sake of completeness, so that we may see the collateral lines, I will here set down the names of the eleven children along with the names of those whom they married.

Samuel Wampler married Magdalene Wine.
 Mary Wampler married Daniel Click.
 John Wampler married Mary Cline.
 Susie Wampler married Joseph Click.
 Annie Wampler married John Kline.
 David Wampler married Annie Long.
 Martin Wampler married Catherine Myers.
 Elizabeth Wampler married Samuel Driver.
 Daniel Wampler married Susie Long.
 Magdalene Wampler married Martin Good.
 Jonas Wampler married Catherine Long.

With this preliminary history as a background, we come now to the particular object of our study.

NO. 1. FIRST GENERATION

John Wampler the second, whose immediate descendants we are tracing, was the third child in this family of eleven. He was born May 10, 1795. When his parents moved to Virginia he was a lad in his seventeenth year. He died March 23, 1869, at the age of nearly seventy-four.

He married Mary Cline, b. May 13, 1802. They were married May 16, 1819. They likewise had a family of eleven children, all of whom grew up, married, and had families. The ages of the eleven children range from thirty-seven to eighty-five years, and average about sixty-four and a half years. The families range in size from four to twelve children each. This is a remarkable family record, and for health and longevity will not easily be surpassed.

When our ancestor decided to establish a home of his own a part of his father's estate was measured off to him. This tract comprised about a hundred and seventy acres, and there is evidence that he later acquired more of the original estate. The land was mostly in timber. Before deciding where he would build his house he went into the woods with a "water witch" to locate his supply of water. After one or two failures he finally struck water at the depth of about forty-five feet while drilling in solid limestone. After setting off a blast the water came in such volume that the workmen were never able to return to the bottom, so an excellent set of blasting tools were left at the bottom of the well. After an adequate supply of water had thus been assured, the dwelling house and other buildings were located with suitable reference to the well.

The farm house must have been built about 1820. It was a substantial building of pine logs hewn smooth on two sides, firmly notched at the corners, filled in with chinking and mortar, then weather-boarded without and plastered within. The main building was about twenty-two by thirty-six feet, two stories high, with a cellar under the entire house. To this was annexed a kitchen about twenty-two feet square, a story and a half high, with a long porch running the entire length of the building.

It was to this house, no unpretentious one for that time, that John Wampler the second brought his new wife, Mary Cline Wampler, to live in the forest a mile from the home of his father. In this house John and Mary Cline Wampler lived the rest of their days. In this house were born their eleven children. In this house the children all grew to manhood and womanhood and were married.

When the family had scattered and the mother had passed to the great beyond, John Wampler broke up house-keeping and sold the farm to Daniel Flory, whose wife, Susannah Wampler, was his seventh child. With this daughter he now made his home the rest of his life.

So it was that Susannah Wampler Flory moved back to the old home in 1866. With the exception of the first six years of her married life, this farm was her home during the eighty-five years of her life. In this same old log house with the long porch and the large open fire-places all her children were born save one, and in this house they all grew up. The old house stood for nearly seventy years. It was torn down by Daniel Flory and a new one erected on nearly the same spot in 1888.

The farm later passed into the hands of Joseph F. Flory, Susannah Wampler Flory's second son, who occupied it until 1918. Since then it has been in the possession of his son, Galen D. Flory, who is the fifth generation of the Wampler family to possess the property; and I regret to have to record the fact that of all the hundreds of acres owned by our first Virginia ancestor, none except this farm remain in the possession of the Wampler family.

The following tabulation will show the family history in one view:

NO. 2. SECOND GENERATION. 1

(1) Catherine Wampler, b. Aug. 17, 1821, was married to David Driver, b. April 25, 1818. David and Catherine Driver began their married life on a farm a mile east of Timberville and adjoining the John Wampler estate. On this farm they lived their entire lives and reared their family. He died November 30, 1897, and was buried in the Wampler cemetery. Three years later his wife also passed away, Oct. 17, 1900, and was laid by his side. For a good while before her death she was a subject of rheumatism and had not been able to walk for some years. Brethren. They left a family of five children.

NO. 3. SECOND GENERATION. 1

(2) Elizabeth Wampler, b. Jan. 30, 1823, was married to Lewis Driver, b. Jan. 20, 1820. Lewis Driver was a brother of David, a case of brothers marrying sisters. The two families lived on adjoining farms in the long meadows. These Driver brothers inherited this land in an undivided tract. They lived in their separate homes and farmed the land together until their older boys grew up. It was then divided into separate farms, but the families continued to help each other do their harvesting. Lewis Driver and his wife were both buried in the Wampler Cemetery, she in 1860, he in 1897. Brethren.
